RAS Buying Recall Switches

Rebuilders Automotive Supply (RAS) has been hired by General Motors to coordinate the purchase and return of certain used parts, which are subject to a product safety ignition switch recall, from aftermarket customers and salvage yards.

RAS is looking to purchase certain GM Ignition Switches, as defined on page 14, for $75 per ignition switch.

These parts can be listed under the Ignition Switch or Steering Column part types, depending how your yard inventories these parts. Please identify if you have any of these parts you want to sell and use the instruction sheet on page 15 to complete the sale.

The part numbers subject to the recall are: GM / AC Delco Ignition & Start Switch service part number 10392423.

This is an important activity and both RAS and GM appreciate your prompt assistance in not re-selling these parts but removing them from your inventory via purchase and shipment to RAS.

Additional part numbers for Ignition & Start Switch Housing Kits are also listed on page 14.

ARA Compels OEM to Provide Info

ARA continues to educate all stakeholders in the parts recall process about the unique and critical role, which professional automotive recyclers play in deciding what happens to recycled OEM parts and how crucial it is for recyclers to have part numbers when making supply chain decisions. This issue will be central to the nation's automotive safety agenda for the foreseeable future and ARA
